REPORTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS BY THE COMMISSIONER OF HIGHER EDUCATION

Commissioner of Higher Education Jim Purcell spoke on how to move Louisiana forward with his presentation entitled “Building Human Capital in Louisiana.” He quoted from the book “The Great Reset: How the Post-Crash Economy will Change the Way We Live and Work.” The quote stated that "The places that thrive today are those with the highest velocity of ideas, the highest density of talented and creative people, and the highest rate of metabolism." The book entitled “Coming Jobs War” notes the importance of having a density of educated skilled workers along with having good access to good schools, colleges, universities and hospitals. He also mentioned that having local leadership is important, along with regional economic development strategies. Dr. Purcell noted that there are some grand business opportunities in the Shreveport, Lake Charles and Baton Rouge areas, but the window of opportunity to develop human capital to serve those regions are short.

One report noted that jobs connected to export industries, such as agriculture, natural resources, and manufacturing, have changed over the past generation. Today, those same workers are persons credentialed with an associate’s degree or higher.

Another report entitled "College Funding Context: Understanding the Difference in Higher Education Appropriations across the States" notes that Louisiana has provided lower than expected levels of support for higher education in the past two decades. In fact, it was noted that the nation is providing the lowest support for higher education since 1965.

Deferred facility maintenance of $1.758 billion and the lowest faculty salaries in the SREB also pose challenges for Louisiana’s higher education. Dr. Purcell noted that North Carolina is one of the few states that have provided more funding to higher education due to its oil boom, while New Hampshire is a “no tax state” and has low support for higher education.
A point from an article in the Miliken Institute noted that if one extra year of education was added to the average years of schooling among the employed in the metro area, the result would be an increase in real wages per worker of 8.4 percent. Giving a person additional education helps the entire economy. The article listed five key policy recommendations:

1. Make higher education more affordable;
2. Make higher education more accessible;
3. Increase higher education graduation rates;
4. Strengthen coordination between higher Ed institutions and industries; and
5. Promote research and development.

These recommendations align with the Board of Regents’ three major master plan goals.

Dr. Purcell next addressed the funding of high cost programs. He said if Louisiana wants to produce graduates in high demand programs, the state must have a funding model that provides the necessary resources. A discussion next ensued regarding increasing tuition, per–credit-hour tuition and differential tuition.

Louisiana is working to address workforce needs by: (1) enhancing campus efforts to address workforce needs; (2) reaching out to our out-of-state alumni to encourage them to return to Louisiana for great new opportunities; (3) listening to business and industry; and (4) seeking additional funding support for higher education.
